REPUBLICANS REVOLT AGAINST HOOVER

LEE OVERMAN, SENATE DEAN, TAKEN FRIDAY

76-Year-Old North Carolina Democrat Succumbs After Hemorrhages.

IN SINCE 1903

Was Leader of Much Legislation During Term.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Senator Lee Slater Overman, 76-year-old North Carolina Democrat and one of the Deans of the Senate, died at 12:40 o'clock this morning from a heart attack which followed a severe hemorrhage of the stomach in the afternoon.

Senator Overman died in his suite in the New Shoreham hotel. At his bedside were his wife, his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar N. Snow of Washington, another son-in-law, E. C. Gregory of Salisbury, N. C., Overman's home, and his physician, Dr. Sterling Ruffin. The latter was one of those who attended the late President Woodrow Wilson during his last illness.

ILL ONE WEEK

The aged North Carolinian had been unwell since last Friday, when a recurrence of old stomach trouble brought on a hemorrhage. After this he rallied somewhat, however, and last Monday was seen briefly on the Senate floor. Dr. Ruffin had hopes of a recovery until the attack yesterday. He expressed the opinion after this Overman would not last the night through. A blood transfusion in the afternoon failed to save the life of the 76 year old patient.

Although plans were fragmentary, members of the family said Senator Overman would be burried in the family plot in Salisbury. A state funeral here will precede services in North Carolina.

Overman played a major in national politics throughout his career in the Senate, which began on March 4, 1903. He has been active in legislative work in recent years even though hampered by feebleness.

BUT ONE OLDER

Only one other senator has served longer than Overmann the other North Carolina Democrat, Senator Furnifold M. Simmons. He preceded Overmann to the senate two years. Senator Reed Smoot, (R) of Utah, came to the senate at the same time Overmann entered.

During the world war period Overmann was conspicious as a party leader and confidant of President Wilson. He secured enactment of the famous Overmann bill, giving President Wilson, czar-like powers during the national emergency. He was active, too in the fight for the enactment of the Clayton anti-trust law and the World War espionage act, and was chairman of the senate committee which investigated German propaganda.

At the time of his death Overman was ranking Democrat on the Senate committees on rules, appropriations and the judiciary. He succeeded early last year in blocking, virtually alone, a determined insurgent Republican move

Do You Know

Benton T. Hedges?

YOU ask how many winters
Are decked on Benton's brow?
There ain't a one! It's summers
He only shows somehow!
At glance you'd say 'round forty-five,--
So kinda keep this dark:
I'd say that Ben is hovering
Around the sixty mark.

He is our city's mayor,
Also has job I hear
Of selling tags for autos --
Six thousand passed last year!
A courteous chap,--small hand to talk.
'Bout five foot seven, to me.
His hair? Well, put that up to Ben,--
Ask what it uster be

A Presbyterian, Treasurer
I've heard of Sunday School.
A Bigger, Better Circleville,
To Ben's a living rule.
(He has the cutest grandkids)
The chickens guide Ben's day.
First crow and Ben hops outa bed,
They perch,--Ben hits the hay!

BANK MANAGER ADMITS THEFT OF 8 MILLIONS

Gilbert Beesemyer, of Hollywood, Cal., Turns All Property Over To Law.

GRILLED HOURS

Gambled In Oil and Markets, Directors Say.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 12.—Directors of the Guaranty building and Loan Association of Los Angeles and Hollywood today announced that Gilbert H. Beesemyer, secretary and general manager of the corporation, had confessed to speculations that would probably reach the total of $8,000,000.

The association operates exclusively in the southern part of California and has no connections with other companies of that name.

After long hours of grilling by the directors of the company, Judge Harlan F. Palmer, Hollywood publisher, who had been called in as advisor to the directors, stated that Beesemyer, an outstanding figure in the financial world of the west, had made a full confession to the speculations.

DISPOSAL QUESTION

"The speculations will probably reach a total of $8,000,000" the statement said. "Just what he did with this vast amount we do not know yet Representatives of the District Attorney's office have been notified."

A probe into the affairs of the Building and Loan Company began shortly after the closing of the Bank of Hollywood, of which Beesemyer was chairman of the board.

Summoned from Sacramento, Charles A. Whitmore, state Building and Loan commissioner, announced that a custodian would be placed in charge of the institution to do everything possible toward salvaging it.

Beesemyer, it was said, has turned over to the company all of his personal property. Directors advanced the hope there would be little, if any, loss to depositors.

Although Beesemyer's complete confession has not yet been made available, it was affirmed that the thefts began about five years ago. To make good his losses, it was said that about two years ago he plunged heavily in oil promotion, which turned out disastrously It was hinted that the collapse of the stock market administered the final blow to him.

Manning Subpoenaed for Trial of Lindsey

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—Companionate marriage was to be the storm center again today as Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver and Bishop William T. Manning faced each other in court. Lindsey is to appear to answer disorderly charges growing out of his ejection from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine after he interrupted the Bishop's sermon against companionate marriage last Sunday.

The hearing is scheduled in West Side court at two o'clock this afternoon.

That Bishop Manning made an attack on companionate marriage, that he attacked Lindsey's personal record and that Lindsey jumped on a table and demanded a hearing but received a hurried and jostled exit instead, was expected to be admitted. But Arthur Garfield Hays, attorney for the fiery little Denver judge, will contend that Bishop's verbal assault was a provocation and was grounds for Lindsey to attempt to strike back.

Hays has subpoenaed Bishop Manning as a witness and has requested him to bring along a marked copy of Lindsey's book on companionate marriage and a letter and telegram which Lindsey sent to him before the Bishop preached his sermon in the Cathedral last Sunday.

Two other "mystery" witnesses have been summoned by Hays.

Lindsey, who is in the east on a lecture tour, said today he was still suffering from the effects of his ejection from the Cathedral. He said he was suffering from a neck bruise, inflicted when some one struck him as he was leaving the church. He also exhibited a black and blue shin, where he said he was kicked.

Judge Lindsey will address an audience of Smith and Mount Holyoke college girls in Northampton, Mass., Sunday and on Monday he will speak in Brooklyn.

Prosecutor And Uncle Enjoying Selves In Trial

County prosecutor, Emmitt L. Crist, and his uncle, C. A. Leist, are having a great time in the case of the state against Donna Stewart.

Crist represents the state and Leist the defendant.

During the course of the trial Thursday afternoon the most the jury as, well as the crowded gallery, heard was, "Objection" by Mr. Leist, "Overruled" by Judge Adkins and "Exception Noted" by Mr. Leist. Trial was making slow progress during the day and Friday was not going along much faster because of the failure of the relatives to agree on what questions and answers should be permitted in the record.

THREE ESCAPE M'ARTHUR JAIL

Dragnet Placed For Men, One Parole Violator; Dig Way To Freedom.

MCARTHUR, O., Dec. 12.—A search dragnet was flung out over this section today for three men, one of them a parole violator from Ohio Penitentiary, who escaped from the Vinton-co jail by digging their way through a brick wall of the bastile

The escaped men were William Phillips, who besides being a parole violator, was awaiting to be returned to the penitentiary to serve a five to 15 year sentence for burglary, and Cecil and Earl Riffle.

Phillips negotiated the escape, according to Sheriff Ray Cox, by digging a hole through the wall of the bull pen with a piece of iron taken from a bunk in one of the cells.

The escape was discovered shortly before 8 o'clock last night when the prisoners were placed in their cells after being turned loose in the bull pen for exercise.

Phillips was admitted to the penitentiary from Pike-co Aug. 1922, to serve five to 15 years for burglary. He was paroled in April 1930.

PARTY BOSSES RAP ATTITUDE OF PRESIDENT

Watson, Senate Leader, Conveys Ideas of Leaders After Meeting.

ISSUE ULTIMATUM

Policies Subjected To Assault In Senate.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—A condition akin to outright revolt against President Hoover's party leadership prevailed among the Republicans in the Senate today as a result of the extraordinary events of the week.

Burning with resentment and openly critical, a dozen or more regular Republicans held a meeting at the Capitol last night and drew up what amounted to both a plea and an ultimatum to Mr. Hoover to "play ball" with his party leaders in Congress or suffer the consequences.

SCORE CO-OPERATION

Mr. Hoover was informed that regular Republican senators were anxious to co-operate with him in carrying out his legislative program, but that they felt some reciprocal measure of co-operation was also due them from the White House.

In particular, the President was told that the Republican leadership desired to be consulted before the issuance of any such statements as that emanating from the White House on Tuesday, which accused members individually of "playing politics with human misery" and with seeking to "raid the treasury."

The sense of the Republican conference was conveyed to Mr. Hoover by Senator James E. Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate. While the conferees sat in the room and listened to the one end of the conversation, Senator Watson picked up the telephone and informed Mr. Hoover of the feelings of his colleagues. What Mr. Hoover said or felt was not made known, but indications were that he did most of the listening while Watson did most of the talking.

REGULARS MEETING

It was an unusual meeting. None of the so-called Republican insurgents took part in the conference. They are already so far off the party reservation that there is little hope that they can be reclaimed. The meeting was composed entirely of party regulars, who have been hurt and bitterly resentful over the week's amazing developments.

For the past three days, the President and his policies have been subjected to savage assault on the Senate floor, with no Republican voice raised in his defense. This fact is said to have irked Mr. Hoover considerably. But Senator Watson informed him last night that Republican Senators felt they could not defend the administration unless the White House took them into its confidence on major matters of party policy.

HOODLUMS FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—Shot to death in a gangland "ride," the bodies of two minor hoodlums were found on the far South Side today riddled with bullets.

Police believe the men were first shot to death and their bodies later tossed from a speeding automobile by the killers.

Authorities identified the two as Rudolph Mareno and James Thomas, alias George Mayo. Mareno was known to police as a minor hoodlum and Thomas had a long police record.

Both men are believed to have been members of the "Spike" O'Donnell gang.

The bodies were found by a passerby in the Evergreen Park district, scene of numerous gun battles of the South Side gangs.

RIFE SPEAKER

S. T. Rife, principal of the eighth grade, addressed the Rotary club at it's Thursday luncheon using the subject of "Congress and What it Means." His talk was very interesting and dealt with this body from its origin until the present time.

FIVE AND A HALF DAY WEEK PROPOSED FOR U. S. WORKERS

WASHINGTON—A campaign to put every department of the federal government on a five and a half day week as the apex of labor's general campaign for shorter work days in commerce and industry is under way in Congress.

Changing sentiment in Congress, as evidenced by the attitude of the House on the Kendall 44-hr week bill for postal workers, encouraged a bloc of members to renew their efforts.

The next step in the program is expected to be a law requiring all government contracts to be let on the basis of a shorter work-day.

Speaker Nicholas Longworth of the house had under consideration a demand by a group of House members that he permit passage of the McCormack bill for Saturday half holidays for federal desion of rules.

The group, including Reps.Leihbach (R) of New Jersey; Gibson (R) of Vermont; McCormack (D) of Massachusetts; Montet (D) of Louisiana; Schneider (R) of Wisconsin; Dallinger (R) of Massachusetts, and American Federal of Labor representatives, called upon Longworth after the house had passed the 44-hour week for postal workers.

Under the McCormack bill, Saturday half holidays would be the rule for all government workers, including laborers and mechanics, with an exception that work on Saturday afternoon could be required in an emergency, a half-holiday would be given during the week in such cases.

The House passed the postal employes shorter work-day bill unanimously, although efforts to consider it had been blocked for two years.

"Passage of legislation placing all government workers on a shorter week is important now as a means of lessening the evil flowing from substitution of machines for man-power," explained McCormack.

"The government should set an example for industry. The bill would make possible employment of more government workers, but is especially important as showing the sentiment of Congress for shorter work-weeks."

An effort was made in the House to attach a "rider" to the $110,000,000 federal works relief bill prohibiting employment of labor for more than seven hours a day.

The proposal could not come to a vote under the rules, and was opposed on the ground that much of the money provided in the bill is to be spent by states on highways. Other proposals for shorter work-days or weeks, however, are expected to be agitated.

Ohio's Tuberculosis Death Rate

THE above graph pictures the trend of the tuberculosis death rate in Ohio from 1915 to 1929, inclusive. It will be noted that there has been an almost steady decline in the rate from 1918 to the present time and records in the State Department of Health show that tuberculosis which ranked second among leading causes of death in 1918 now occupies sixth place.

"If the tuberculosis death rate is to continue in its downward trend," says Dr. Charles A. Neal, state director of health, "an intensive effort will have to be exerted by all public health forces in Ohio. The prolonged drought through which we have just passed and the present unemployment situation will leave in their wake intense suffering, material loss and a shortage of good nourishing food. That an increase in disease will follow is inevitable."

"The twenty-fourth annual Christmas health seal sale which opens November 28 and closes December 24 presents an opportunity for all to assist in the fight against tuberculosis," says the director. "It is to be hoped that the citizens of the state will give the 1930 Christmas seal sale the support which it deserves so that the work which has been so well started may continue."

Consider the Mistletoe

IT is a heartening thing to observe the mistletoe is in as much demand as ever, regardless of the reputed brazen promiscuity of the modern kiss. Perhaps, after all, the flapper of today is only flattering herself and is not so much ahead of the past as she believes.

However that may be, there seems to be no diminution of the mistletoe's sentimental significance since the day when Thomas Bayly celebrated it in his lugubrious poem. Many recall the couplet:

"The mistletoe hung in the castle hall,
The holly-branch shone on the old oak wall."

Well, the holly-branch can still hang on the oak wall or on the modern walnut veneer wall, or whatever you have, and so can the mistletoe hang naively between the portieres, with its challenge to bashful youth to put it over once anyway. Custom decrees that maidens shall be wary, but not too wary: a trifle of a scream, a gasp of utter surprise, and it is over, and on the whole very satisfying. If you doubt that, notice the patronage given to your mistletoe and in particular observe your aunt as she marches by it.

This is, in fact, a relic of childhood, which is sufficient guarantee of its innocence. Ever since the apple trees of Normandy sent the parasitical mistletoe to England it has been the giggling tit-bit of the Christmas party. Since young men—or is it only young men?—do like occasionally to kiss young girls, here is a sort of sportsmanlike arrangement. Nothing prevents the lady from detouring around the mistletoe. If she does not care to do so, that obviously is a self-sought peril, justly punished by a kiss. If she simply does not perceive the hazard, well isn't that life for you? An anticipated danger and high adventure all in a breath.

It is just a custom, rather pretty and somewhat touching, if we, like Mr. Pickwick, choose to lead beneath it those whose dearness is that of years and gray hair.

It Benefits All

WHERE is there a man with senses so dull he cannot derive supreme satisfaction from the sight of sidewalks and stores jammed with Christmas shoppers? There is none.

Nothing so pleases the merchant for he measures his own prosperity by the size of the shopping crowd. But it is not only the business man who can take satisfaction in the congested stores and streets which mark this paricular season of the year.

To the factory worker these crowds mean employment and good wages. To the citizen of any community these crowds mean prosperity for his home town or city. To society these crowds mean peace and the lightening of the burden placed upon society by the dependent.

One thing most Christmas-gift buyers overlook is that the gift benefits not alone the recipient. The Christmas shopper in placing capital at the command of industry and business, giving employment to labor and giving to the community its very life's blood business. Recognition of this fact makes even easier the pre-Christmas conversion of hoarded dollars into gifts.

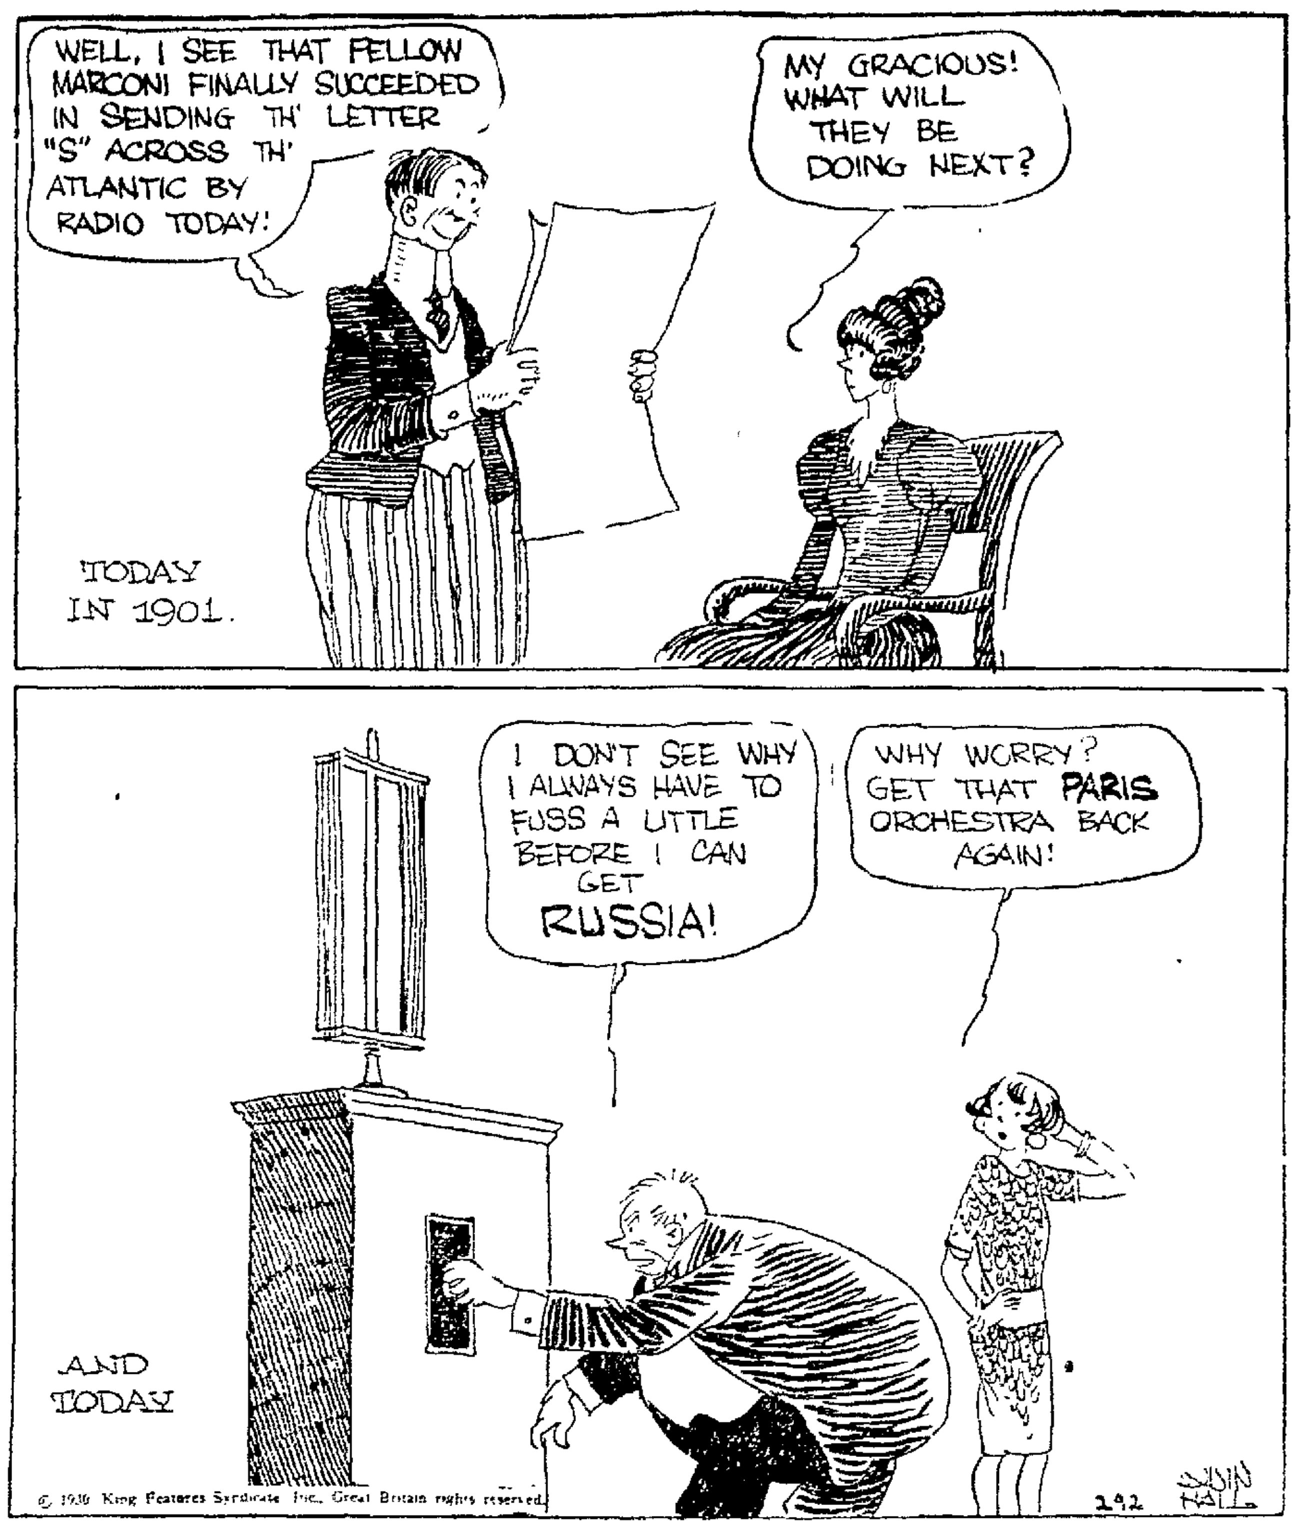

Like a boomerang the money society spends for its Christmas shopping comes back to it. From producer to consumer to producer again and all men at profits either with their capital or their labor.

No [illegible] in this enlightened age predicates absurd predictions of economic calamity on that which some in former [illegible] chose to call the Christmas [illegible] of spending and waste of the fruits of capital and labor.

Either some of the sweet things are wearing clothes an inch and a half or so longer this winter, or the girls are shorter.

THEN AND NOW

GIRL UNAFRAID

BY GLADYS JOHNSON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

Ardeth Carroll has charge of the specialty shop owned by wealthy Jeanette Parker. She meets Ken Gleason, fiance of Jeanette's sister, Cecile, and they fall in love. Their marriage is prevented by Ken's mother's wish that he marry Cecile. When Ken fails to keep an appointment with Ardeth, Tom Corbett takes her to dinner. They meet Ken and Cecile.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIX.

ARDETH was standing on the pavement before the entrance of the hotel when Ken's car pulled up.

Her heart leaped painfully as their eyes met. No bright and laughing charm about Ken today. His face was pale. His mouth grim.

He opened the door of the car and she got in without a word.

Sunday calm over the city. Church bells ringing near and far. Children, self-conscious in their best clothes, walking through the sunshine to Sunday school. Stacks of the morning papers in corner stores. An air of leisurely well being over the city. Bleakness only in her heart . . .

"Well," Ken said finally in a tight voice. "Through with me, aren't you?"

She moved her hands slightly but did not answer.

He gave a mirthless laugh. "Don't blame you...It's the only way out, I guess. Here's what happened, whether you want to hear it or not. Late yesterday Dr. Knowles got in touch with me. He's an old friend...and he told me that mother——" he gulped, "my mother's in a bad way, Ardeth. She—she's going. Just a matter of time——"

He suddenly stopped.

Ardeth found that her cold hand had gone to cover his own on the wheel. He did not seem to feel it and after a moment she took it back.

Mother Love.

"I can't believe it!" Sharp protest in that which almost rose to panic. For a moment he [illegible] silently, then resumed, more quietly, "well...it's what comes to us all, I guess. But to watch it—day by day! No hope—the doctor said. Oh, of course she doesn't know. She thinks its something else—that she's getting better. But that time—that time I told you about, when she just about starved herself and lived in that cold, moldy room—that started it. Ardeth. And when I remember she did it for me—so I could [illegible] comfort—like a fool. God, I feel as though I had murdered her!"

"No! No, Ken! You couldn't help it! How could you know!"

She was watching him with eyes gone wet. Ken stared straight ahead. His [illegible] with suffering. His [illegible] were [illegible].

[illegible]

Ardeth. Oh—I know we all die—but still—my mother. . . I actually know——"

He drew a deep breath. "She's always been a little thing—but the spirit of a soldier. I used—I used to call her Spider Kelly—to tease her. Such a dainty, imperious little thing, you know, it sounded funny. And I'd swoop on her—times when I came home, and grab her under one arm and pack her around like that—and she scolding me in that gentle dignified way and pretending she didn't like it—while I laughed. . ."

He suddenly stopped speaking.

After a long moment. "Well . . .When I went home—after seeing Dr. Knowles, she springs on me that it's Cecile's birthday.

"You know, Ardeth." Ken's voice was badgered. "mother's completely sold on Cecile. All my life—oh, well, I've told you that. Well—ever since we were kids I've gone to Cecile's birthday party. It used to be ice cream fights, you know, when we were youngsters. And since she's grown up, dinners and dances. You know, those things start and pretty soon they're more than a habit. They—well, they sort of weave into a fellow's life and a thing he has to do. And she—and mother—took it for granted I'd come this year—as always. And I'd forgotten every little thing about it."

Ken had been driving the car up the [illegible] which led to the crest of [illegible] Hill. Now he swung out [illegible] broad [illegible] drive and came to a stop by [illegible]. The cliff fell away before them. Far below [illegible] like a fan, white [illegible] to the Alameda and [illegible] stretched open [illegible] wash of Autumn [illegible]

[illegible] "I'll clear [illegible] about [illegible] all [illegible] I was late [illegible]." He moved [illegible] in the seat. "To go anywhere after hearing from Doc—

. . . and yet I couldn't let her guess . . . I was pretty nearly crazy—"

Crushed Hopes.

Ken's words—sending a poison of despair stealing through her... Not wild and rebellious despair which held bracing anger. This was a cold hand crushing down in her heart. Crushing hope.

She was face to face with the thing she feared. Here was the reason for that uncertainty which had lurked beneath her happiness. Fate had cornered her—and she could not fight back.

Her youth and beauty—they were weapons to wield against Cecile. But that threatening future had changed its appearance. No longer Cecile's beautiful, cynical face which opposed her. Cecile was a secondary menace now.

That unfriendly future had taken on the aspect of a frail old woman. A feeble woman who held the invincible weapon of helplessness.

Faint terror stealing through her . . . and the sick sense of being beaten.

"Well—that's the gist of it—" Ken's voice was tired and beaten. "I'll be frank. I forgot all about you, Ardeth, and our dinner engagement. I was like something crazy. Took all my wits to keep up in front of mother. Mustn't let her suspect. . . . I had to go out to Cecile's dinner, of course, or she'd have begun to ask questions. When I met the others I sort of got a grip on myself. I remembered you. I got to a telephone. But you'd already left. And then I saw you out there with Tom."

"Oh, Ken—Ken!"—she was groping for him, blind with [illegible] and despair.

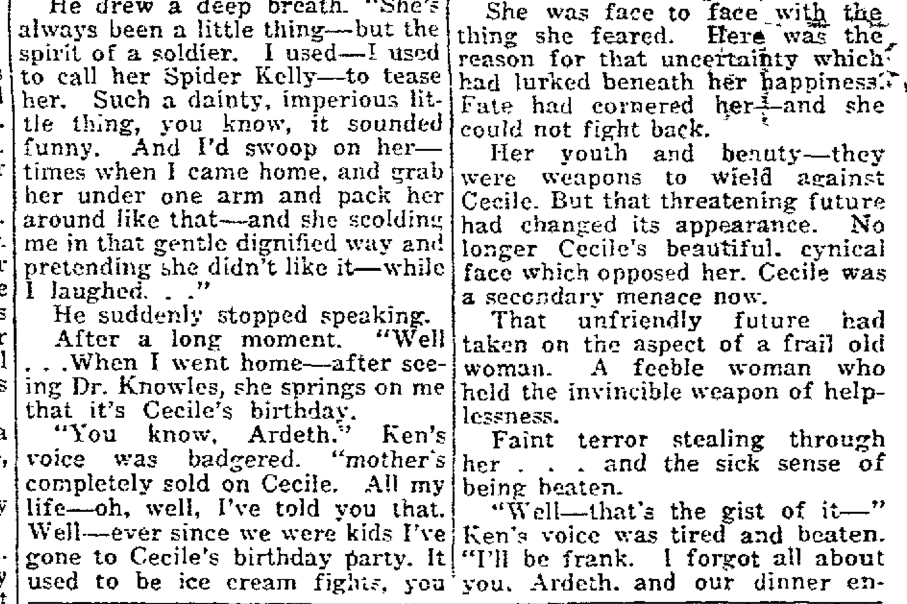

He patted her arm, but his eyes were absent and there was a grim set to his mouth.

"Ken" her voice [illegible] "I can't [illegible] I didn't guess. [illegible] And while I was waiting Tom passed [illegible] want alone [illegible] you know."

He interrupted [illegible] "I don't blame you, Ardeth [illegible] look on at Tom [illegible] shouldn't talk—I have no right [illegible]."

"Don't say that!" [illegible] "Oh, I [illegible] there's only [illegible]!" He closed [illegible] his arms about him.

To Be Continued.

Her heart leaped painfully as their eyes met.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

In the scintillating dialogue of Constance Bennett's new Pathe picture, "Sin Takes a Holiday," there is sparkling wit for which she is justly famous in private life.

With the support of Kenneth MacKenna, Basil Rathbone, and Louis Bartels, Rita La Roy, Miss Bennett plays the role of a quick-brain secretary to a rather world weary millionaire attorney. They join in a marriage of convenience.

The story takes Miss Bennett to Paris, where in the character of a charming wife, separated from her husband by 3,000 miles of water, she demonstrates with characteristic ability the known, but always interesting theory, that sex appeal is the thing that makes the world go 'round—sometimes straight, but more often crooked.

"Sin Takes a Holiday" will be shown at the Metropolitan theatre for 3 days commencing Sunday.

AT THE GRAND

Coming from highly successful engagements Page Kiddies' Band, one of the Publix headline acts, will be seen at the Grand theatre Sunday, in conjunction with the photoplay, "On the Level."

Page Kiddies' Band is composed of six talented youngsters ranging in age from 5 to 15 years and all or rare musical ability. Nothing quite so novel, entertaining and pleasing has ever been seen on the stage before and this engagement promises to be a real treat.

Many times acts termed as so-called "juvenile acts" have been disappointing because they would nine times out of ten really feature persons of adult age, but not so with the Page Kiddies' Band. This act is just as advertised, six children who will delight you with their presentations, and the selections rendered would do credit to a first class adult musical organization. Their program is featured by several saxophone, trumpet and trombone numbers, vocal selections and mixed musical numbers.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Billy the Kid" which will open at the Cliftona theatre Friday for two days has been added by King Vidor of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to the famous increasing list of pictures dedicated to various phases of American history.

"Billy the Kid" relates the stirring happenings at Lincoln New Mexico during the famous "cattlemen's war" of 1878, 1879 and 1880. The career of William Bonney during that time is the crux of the wildest point the wild west ever reached.

Other pictures in the history class are "James Meredith," "The Covered Wagon," "The Birth of A Nation," "Abraham Lincoln" and "The Big Parade."
